Sickle Cell and the Social Sciences

Health, Racism and Disablement

Simon M. Dyson, De Montfort University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the Sociology of Health and Illness

Sickle cell disease (SCD) is a severe chronic illness, and one of the world's most common genetic conditions, with up to 400,000 children born annually with the disorder, mainly in sub-Saharan Africa, India, Brazil, and the Middle East. Often a condition rendered invisible in policy terms because of its problematic association with politically marginalized groups, the social study of sickle cell has been neglected. This illuminating volume explores the challenges and possibilities for developing a social view of sickle cell, and for improving the quality of lives of those living with SCD.
